This Recorder finger chart is in the soprano recorder. First we will examine the natural notes, then in another table we will present you with the modified notes, that is, notes of sharp notes and flats. Despite this, you already know that in the main section you can consult all the notes in a more complete way with the whole recording of the individual and soprano recorder. It's also important to review our page on how to play the blow until it's played, if you still have doubts about how to meet the blow or place your fingers. Let's hope you can keep playing songs with an open finger. Now let's start with the first Recorder notes Chart, pay attention to all the natural notes of the recorder. This Recorder Notes Chart is also ideal for kids. As you can see in this finger chart, you can see each note clearly with the finger and with all the fingers you need to put in it. In addition, the large scale is ordered up in order so that you can play the C grand scale correctly. You can better distinguish each note, and each note will always be named with a letter, since it also has the corresponding letter, so that it is painted with a color. This will also help our recorder songs to interpret our scores. Do not forget to consult the section on how to play the recorder in doubt how you put each finger. Ok and now let's see the chart of recorder notes below! As you can see, this time we have grouped notes with sharp and straight Color. Fingering will be the same for both, so you only need to learn five more fingers to have a color scale on your recorder. All these recorder notes can be printed in graphics. It's good, isn't it? How to play recorder notes graphics These recorder notes graphics with all letters so it is very easy to know which note you are playing, just look at the letter below. Note that the staff is written on it and fingered on the flute above. We are going to play a modified note we need to know what we are going to name because it is the same to play C sharply as D straight. If you have a more modern soprano recorder, you will find that it has the smallest holes. Take a good look at the difference between C natural and C sharp. You just have to lift your little finger to make it sharp, you have to release the smallest hole. When you know how to play these two recorder tables, you can start playing the chromatic scale on the recorder. Then we leave you the last table so that you play all the notes of the chromatic scale, we play the notes up to half a ton distance. Look at the chromatic scale on the recorder! As you can see here, the chromatic scale has 12 notes. If you can play these twelve notes, you will be able to play most of the songs available on this website. We just need to go over the high notes. We hope that this course with recorder notes charts has helped you greatly and you can start playing songs with them. Will you play a new recorder looking for some easy songs to get started? Want a good list of simple recorder songs for your young students? When you start introducing or playing the recorder, it is usually the first experience in playing an instrument that requires breath control and multiple fingering techniques. As with learning something new, it helps to learn from easy tasks at first. From both my elementary school music students and what I taught, I saw that this job was good. If you do it too much, too fast, they get overwhelmed quickly. That's why 8 easy songs on a recorder have intensified this list. The easy songs in the recorder are separated by the notary they use. They have easy rhythms and start with step-by-step movement notes. Here are my favorite novice recorder tunes: See ahead for more information on why I took each of these. Also, click on the links of the songs for a special post on how to specifically teach songs and notes. What a Recorder Easy Song On Look Tells you what it would take to be considered easy to have an easy song in this episode. This is good for each of the elements, but the whole song is not necessary to be simple. But there are more elements, better (at least as low a challenge goes). When playing Different Pitches Number Recorder, the hardest part for most people is the downward fingers. Inch I'm doing an exercise with my students to prove how important fingering is. I'm going to tell a student to blow a long air while he's doing notes on recorders with his fingers. I'm going to play something a lot harder than they could have reached, and I'm going to point out that if they knew the fingers, they could steal anything. Most kids like it and get motivated. But if there's a ton of different notes, people get overwhelmed. An easy song needs fewer notes. 3 note songs are the best, but 4 and 5 are very ok as long as the notes are not a lot of step-by-step movement and jumping around. Usually the first 3 notes that are considered the easiest are B-A-G. The high D-high C-A is also quite easy. A-G-E is also easy. Song's Length The length of the song also has a direct impact on how long it takes to learn the song. Usually, long songs have multiple sections and a lot of different materials. This make it difficult for the student to keep track of everything they need. It also increases the chances of the student giving up when he makes too many mistakes. Shorter = easier. Recurring Along the same lines, it will be easier to learn new material throughout if the song re-uses a lot of the same ideas. Look at hot cross buns. The song is only 4 measures long and 3 are exactly the same. Look at the songs with repetitive material, let them sit down faster. Familiar Vs. UnfamiliarObviously, if you know the song, you get it much easier. I just don't mean if you've played before. Even if you've heard of it, it makes a big difference. For example: The baby shark song is not too difficult, but the related notes are a bit difficult. Yet many students will learn this song more easily than Au Clair De La Lune at first because they have listened to Baby Shark many times. With notes as difficult as rhythms and Meter UsedNotalar, recorder learners don't need to be distracted by complex rhythms. Each song on the list uses the basic rhythms that most students will have heard in the second grade. Avoid three meters for dotted rhythms and easy songs. RangeRecorders are known as selectors in the range they play, especially with budget recorders. Take a look at the best soprano recorder brands. On its high notes (i.e. D and above), it does not squeak, but the sound tends towards the end of the high. In sub-notes (past the bottom e), plastic recorders are more difficult to make the right sound in particular. These notes squeak more easily and always sound a little weaker. An easy recorder song doesn't go beyond that range for very long. This does not mean that songs outside the range cannot be easy, but novice recorder players often require a skill set beyond what you have to offer. Other Great Recorder ResourcesThis has some of my favorite recorder song sources. If you want to surpass the 8 songs in the next section, take a look at some of these books. This is largely a personal list, but it was built in a decade while teaching and playing recorder. Note: For more information about how songs are taught, click the link to that page. In this article, review the things that make these songs easier I will give you a score out of 10 1 which is very easy for each of these songs to help you decide the home you want to teach. Hot Cross Buns - 1/10It doesn't get much easier than that. Hot Cross Buns is almost just the first song recorder (and many other instruments) taught. It uses only three shots: B-A-G. Their rhythms are simple quarter notes, half notes and eighth notes. The melody is the same for 3 of 4 measurements and moves in a diminishing motion. All pitch moves, especially with these three notes, are smarter to move more easily. This song is almost a transit during which you play a recorder. Parents and adults claim to hate it even as children, but I've never seen students who didn't want to play it over and over again. Go To Sleep - 1/10 Go To Sleep is, in my opinion, anti-Hot Cross Doughnuts. This song uses 3 notes: G-A-B. If you compare this song to Hot Cross Buns, you will notice that it is almost the same, except in reverse. This is a great application for increased movement and 4 measures out of 3 are the same again. Even better, rhythm uses only a quarter of notes and half notes. This song makes a good joint song with Hot Cross Buns. Play them at the same time and it sounds good! It's never too early to get students to play harmony with the recorder. Au Clair De La Lune - 2/10This recorder is another fiber in the world. The whole melody repeats itself twice, so once you know one half, you can take the other down! It uses only 3 notes: G-A-B. Their rhythm is very simple using only quarter notes, half notes and all notes. The song dominates once beautiful and catchy. Au Clair gets another difficult point because he comes up with the idea of skipping grades. Although the first two are step by step, this features a G → B a jump. This is good and not hard to do, although some may struggle with it at first. Merrily We Roll Along 2.5/10Merrily We Roll Along (and related song Mary Had A Little Lamb) usually learn the latest B-A-G song students. Then sing a 3 note with the option to add high D. The melody is usually all step by step with some extra up and down movement that fools students at first. Their rhythm is also simple: quarter notes, eighth notes, and half notes. With this song comes the length of the cheat and Merrily is twice as long as most other songs at this level, and the melodic material does not re-use a tone. Almost everyone has heard this song with a little difficulty. Rain Rain Rain Go Away 3/10Rain Rain Go Away is a 3-note song with different notes. Depending on your order of preference, you can play as a-G-E or high D-C-A. Either someone has a similar difficulty. For the lower A-G-E, finger lama is easier, although it is difficult to talk at first. The D-C-A is louder and the good sound is easier, but the fingers are a little misleading. Either way, this song gets its high score jumping around the notes. Rhythm is easy though with quarter notes and eighth notes. Although most people are quite familiar with this, which helps. Closet Key – 2/10Closet Key is a song similar to Au Clair.It and uses 3 notes, B-A-G and quarter notes and eighth notes for rhythms. The melody is repetitive and simple to learn. In fact, I believe I can find many studentsmerrily or even Au Clair more easily. But since most students don't know this (unless they've lived me for a teacher in this case they taught them in another class), sometimes it takes longer to learn. Baby Shark - 3/10Yep. Baby Shark is on the list. Hate it all you want, but this song is perfect for isolating either the C → B switch or the new note F#, depending on the key. Their rhythm is simple: quarter notes, eighth notes and half notes. The notes used are either G-A-B-C or D-E-F#-G. This is the hardest part and why it takes a 3/10. However, EVERYONE has heard this song to find out if it's good or bad, so it's not just the fingers you have to do, it's the song you had to go to. Let's Go to the Sports Team, Let's Go! – 2.5/10 Is this a real song? Probably not; It's more of a joy. But cheering C → A. Great for learning a simple jump overall, the song uses only 3 notes: C-A-G. This new note does make it a little more difficult, but most people recognize this cheer of any sporting event. Tip: This school is a great way to build a community, and maybe these very cool-for-school kids get some buy-in. Rhythms are easy: quarter notes, eighth notes, quarter rest. The students applaud when we learn this song, which really excites them. What is the easiest song to ordeal in Frequently Asked Questions Recorder? - It's really a matter of opinion, but I believe Hot Cross Buns is generally easy. It uses 3 notes, is very repetitive and well known. Is it hard to steal the recorder? Yes and no. Compared to most other instruments, it is easy to learn the recorder. However, it takes time to master like any other instrument. It is also often the first instrument to be taught air control and finger-pointing, which is difficult for many at first. Are wooden recorders better than plastic tendaha? – Mostly yes. Usually a little more fragile, but the sound quality is head and shoulders on plastic ones. We tend to use plastic in schools, they are cheaper and and A little better. You want to learn a song on the piano? Browse flowkey! Click here to learn your favorite songs! Conclusion I hope to find this list of recorder 8 easy songs useful in the class or improve your recorder skills. I love teaching recorders and your students will also love these songs. It is extra useful that students need to fight and dig another song to get their foundation safe. Choosing easy songs is the first place to go, but when it comes to really recording learning, you need a plan.
